A REVISED CHECKLIST OF TEXAS CAVES

INTRODUCTION

"A Checklist of the Caves of Texas" appeared in April 1962 and included 1031 "caves". Many of the caves which were listed there have since proved to either not be caves by our definition, to be synonymous with other caves on the list, to be hopelessly unfindable, or to be rumors. Many of these were word-of-mouth reports and no information can now be found in our files on these caves; others were names for which we had only the poorest of data. Many caves reported on in the various issues of the Texas Speleological Survey have even proved to be what we call "doubtful caves". By applying our present rigorous standards to the first list we must eliminate about 230 of its 1031 caves. This revised checklist now includes 1362 caves, an actual increase of about 561 caves from those actually known in April 1962. Every cave reported on in this checklist is represented in our files by reports of sufficiently good quality to convince us that they can be recognized and found. We realize that this may be slightly idealistic and there are certainly many errors. To decrease these we sent out preliminary sheets of this list to a number of active cavers in the state. We received a few of these back and it is appropriate here to thank James Estes, Abilene Grotto; Carl Kunath, San Angelo; Tom Meador, Eldorado; and James Jasek, Waco, for taking the time to go through these lists and return them with corrections and additional reports. If everyone in Texas had the interest and were as conscientious as these cavers this list would be more than doubled in size.

We will make no attempt here to add to the original distribution note on caves. The 1964 NSS Convention Guide Book included a revised summary of distribution of Texas caves. It will suffice here to mention those areas where the most significant contributions have been made since the first checklist. The large caves of Northwest Texas (King, Childress, Cottle, Hardeman, and Stonewall Counties) have been visited and many mapped; many caves have been discovered and mapped in a previously unlisted county, Coryell County; about thirty caves have been explored in the gypsum plain south of State Line in Culberson County; 42 caves have been discovered and explored on the Jackson Ranch in Lampasas County; many new caves have been discovered and mapped in the Amistad Dam Area of Val Verde County; and, finally, the discovery and mapping of Powell's Cave, the exploration of Neel's Cave, and investigation of the Silver Mine Area in Menard County show us that there are still big caves and interesting new areas to be found.
